

As an architect, Rob promotes a collaborative approach, encouraging strong communication and opportunities to work closely with clients to achieve the best possible product. With a background in architecture and art history, Rob strives to create sensible and context-related solutions to architectural challenges that meet the clients' needs and exceed expectations. His significant experience with building technologies and sustainable building strategies aids in his approach to the architectural design process, which he believes is most successful when it blends art with functionality and technology.

Rob joined The Sheward Partnership in 2010. He has since worked on a variety of project types and has significant experience in all phases of the design and construction process. Rob earned a Bachelor of Architecture with a minor in Art History at Drexel University, where he graduated Magna Cum Laude and Honors with Distinction.
